Established in 2002, the Global Partnership for Education works in 60 developing countries. Strategically, the Global Partnership for Education focuses on supporting education in fragile and conflict-affected countries, promoting girls' education, increasing basic numeracy and literacy skills in primary school, improving teachers' effectiveness and help expanding external and domestic financing for education. How can the Global Partnership contribute to meeting the Millennium Development Goal for education? How does the Global Partnership work with the EU and other donors and partners? What are the lessons learned from the Global Partnership's 2014/15 Results for Learning report? Let's try to respond to these questions and explore the new challenges of global education.
