

Annex 1. Introduction to questionnaire

Dear Sir/Madam,

The European Union Water Initiative (EUWI) is an effort to increase the effectiveness of the significant financial and technical resources available within the EU and its Member States for overseas development assistance, in order to maximise its individual and joint efforts in meeting the needs of the world's poorest and achieving the Millennium Development Goals for water and sanitation (<http://www.euwi.net/>).

In 2003, the EUWI established a Finance Work Group (FWG) which performed several studies around finance mechanisms in the water sector. The FWG is made up of representatives from a variety of organisations from different sectors, EU member states, government departments, private sector funders, private sector operators, NGO's, and bilateral and multilateral donors from the European Union but also from other regions in the world. These organisations have significant experience using finance mechanisms in developing countries.

Through the FWG's exploration of finance mechanisms for the water sector, it became apparent that an information gap exists about how finance mechanisms work, and how they are used. Whilst some donors and International Finance Institutions provide information about their financial products online, there are no comprehensive sources of information about the universe of products on offer and how they work, particularly in relationship to the water sector (which includes water governance). Information about finance mechanisms from a demand-led perspective is patchy and often anecdotal, rather than organised in any systematic way.

About the Water Finance Guide

Within the European Water Initiative, a website has been setup as a first response to the identified gap (prototype under development at <http://financeguide.euwi.net/>). The objective is to provide users of finance, typically in developing countries, with a means to identify different types of finance mechanisms that are available for the water sector, how they work (broadly), and provide linkages to other sites on the Internet, which can provide additional details and information. The present Water Finance Guide website is a first step towards creating a highly interactive “one stop” source of information about the range of finance mechanisms available for the water and sanitation sector, to increase knowledge and capacity for accessing finance./

The Water Finance Guide website is intended to be used by three groups of audiences:

- WHAT-questions: people who do not know anything about finance mechanisms and its instruments.

For instance, people who want to know what a municipal bond is or what output based aid involves. This audience will be served with a glossary;

- HOW-questions: people who want to have a guide through concrete examples from other situations.

For instance, people who want to understand how a mechanism is being applied in the water and sanitation sector, who want to learn from other people's experiences, failures and successes. This audience will be served with case stories;

- WHERE-questions: the website provides functionality equal to a marketplace. It enables demand and supply to be brought together.

The Guide provides an interesting opportunity to bring information together from various sources of supply of finance mechanisms and instruments. As such, the Water Finance Guide aims at creating synergy and preventing duplication of efforts. For this to work however, input and cooperation from a variety of finance providers is required both within and outside the European Union.
