

PRACTICAL TIP

“I think we have a unique opportunity today to reimagine development cooperation as distinct from foreign policy. My advice to colleagues would be to remain nimble and think about how you can act as a translator between actors looking to make investments, and actors - especially local organisations - who need resources but might not have the toolkit to access them.

Also, just try to keep up hope. The uncertainty we face now isn't just about what's been lost, but what might emerge in its place.”
