

EVIDENCE TO INFORM POLICY: USEFUL READINGS

- Five plus four ingredients for the effective use of science to inform policy, <http://www.ingsa.org/ingsa-blog/five-plus-four-ingredients-for-the-effective-use-of-science-to-inform-policy/>
- Sucha, Vladimir et al., 2015, The In-House Science Service: The Evolving Role of the Joint Research Centre, PP. 40 - 50 in Future Directions For Scientific Advice in Europe by James Wilsdon and Robert Doubleday (eds.), available at <http://www.csap.cam.ac.uk/media/uploads/files/1/future-directions-for-scientific-advice-in-europe-v5a-online-version-26042015.pdf>
- Synthesis Report of Science Advice to Governments Conference on 28-29 August 2014 in Auckland, New Zealand, available at http://www.pmcsa.org.nz/wp-content/uploads/Synthesis-Report_Science-Advice-to-Governments_August-2014.pdf
- Roger Pielke on Five Modes of Science Engagement, available at <http://rogerpielkejr.blogspot.be/2015/01/five-modes-of-science-engagement.html>
- Gluckman, Peter, 2014, The Art of Science Advice to Government, Nature, Vol.507 PP.163 – 165, available at <http://www.nature.com/news/policy-the-art-of-science-advice-to-government-1.14838>
- OECD's GSF report on "Scientific Advice for Policy Making: The Role and Responsibility of Expert Bodies and Individual Scientists", <http://www.oecd.org/sti/sci-tech/science-advice.htm>
- Policy and the Evidence Beast, Rathenau Institute, <https://www.rathenau.nl/en/publication/policy-and-evidence-beast>
- Paul Cairney, The Politics of Evidence-based Policymaking, <https://paulcairney.wordpress.com/ebpm/>